Design Questionnaire

On the following pages, please find a list of topics or categories to consider as you imagine what your ideal home design would look like. Be prepared to discuss your preferences for appliances, windows, flooring, interior design and even automobiles.

Thought provoking comments and questions:

1. How do you imagine your home will look as someone approaches? Is there a dominant first impression or feel? Should the front entry be dramatic or welcoming? Do you prefer understated or bold architectural design?
2. Do you have views that will dictate room and window locations? Are the views a primary driving force for the home design?
3. How should your home relate to the outdoor space around it? How do you want your outdoor spaces to feel? Have you considered an outdoor living or dining space? Does indoor-outdoor living appeal to you?
4. How do indoor spaces relate to each other? Are the living spaces open or more defined? Are the private spaces grouped together or spread apart from one another? How about a place where you can escape or a private area where you gather with friends?
5. Cooking and dining play major roles in the lifestyles of most individuals and families. Life revolves around the kitchen and dinner table. Entertaining, whether it's formal or family, can be enhanced by the kitchen and dining areas. Gatherings and the best conversations frequently seem to end up in the kitchen. Family dining space is coming back into vogue and the kitchen is often the favorite space for crafts and homework.
6. The frequency of guests and visitors should be considered in your new home design. How long do you expect guests to stay and how comfortable do you want them to be? Who are your likely guests going to be and what are their needs? Consider these potential visitors, each with different needs:
  - Out-of-town friends or family stopping by for a short stay;
  - Your childrens' friends for hanging out or stay overs;
  - Married children and grandchildren visiting for an extended period;
  - College graduate children returning home until their new life is established;
  - Elderly parents moving in out of necessity or convenience; and,
  - Home office clients meeting for business purposes.
7. What "stuff" do we need to incorporate into the design? Do you have a piano or furniture pieces that we need to know about? Do you have artwork or family photos to display?

Trends indicate that there is a substantial increase in multi-generation families. Whether out of need or because of culture or convenience, the design of a home can play a role in providing privacy while still addressing individual and family needs.

We hope to demonstrate how your wants and needs should influence the design of your home. Our goal is to rattle the rocks in your head and hopefully consider ideas that you didn't have before we talked. You may find the process amusing. Let us know when you'd like to talk.
